Reading: The Beach Clean-Up Crew

Read the story. Then answer the questions on the next page.

On a bright Saturday morning, nine-year-old Sam grabbed his bucket and gloves and hurried to the beach. He had joined the Beach Clean-Up Crew, a group of kids and parents who met once a month to keep the sand clean. When Sam arrived, his friend Priya was already there. She waved and pointed at a big blue bin. 'Team Blue gets this bin,' she said. 'Let's see who fills theirs first!' Sam and Priya worked hard. They picked up bottles, wrappers, and old sandals. Soon their bin was full, and they had to get a second one. Sam was surprised by how much rubbish people left behind. At noon, the crew leader, Mr. Ada, blew his whistle. 'Great work, everyone!' he shouted. 'We collected twenty bags today!' Sam felt proud as he looked at the clean sand. A crab scuttled across the smooth beach. 'The beach is beautiful again,' Priya said, smiling. Sam nodded. He could not wait for next month.
